PRELIMINARY

The Maltese legal system presents quite a sophisticated and comprehensive framework which in part reflects the various foreign influences that have designed the Island's history. Over the years, Malta has been ruled by Phoenicians, Carthaginians, Romans, the Knights of the Order of St. John and for a few years by the French under Napoleon. For long periods in its history, the Island also formed part of the Italian kingdom to its north. More recently, between 1800 and 1964, Malta formed part of the British Empire.

Malta has a written Constitution based on the British Westminster model that has been adopted in many other states forming part of the British Commonwealth. It incorporates the basic constitutional framework adopted by the United Kingdom, but with a single legislature. General elections, based on proportional representation, are held at least once every five years. Responsibility for government lies in a Cabinet of Ministers led by the Prime Minister. The head of state is the President who is elected by Parliament.

Administrative law and practice follow closely British laws and practice. Indeed, the government civil service is broadly organised on the United Kingdom model. In 1964, Malta became an independent nation and a full member of the United Nations. In 1974, the island effected constitutional changes and became a republic. Maltese and English enjoy the status of official languages. This means that all laws and regulations are drafted and published in both languages.

While most of public law is inspired by the United Kingdom model, the country's private law is largely continental (European). Malta is basically a civil law jurisdiction, and much of its law has been codified. Five codes of law still provide the bulk of Malta's civil and criminal rules and procedures, closely following the model originally introduced by the Napoleonic Code. This system, which traces its origins to Roman law, still prevails in large parts of Western Europe including France, Italy, Belgium and Germany. It is interesting to note that the codified system on the continental (European) model was introduced during the second half of the 19th century by the British administration which had been governing the island as a crown colony since the overthrow of the French occupying forces.

Since Malta follows what is usually referred to as the continental (European) model of private law, English common law as a rule does not apply. Nonetheless, its influence is greatly felt in much of local commercial practice and regulation, especially in company law and in insurance and banking law which closely follow English practice. Most recent legislation, including the various financial services laws adopted in 1994 owe a debt to English statutes. The Investment Services Act had adopted concepts from the Financial Services Act of the United Kingdom of 1986, while the shipping, insurance, money laundering and insider dealing laws (to mention just a few instances) have been largely influenced by European Union legislation. Substantial parts of the Companies Act represent a simplified version of the English Companies Act of 1985, including most of the provisions dealing with the limited liability company, accounting and insolvency. In 1988, Malta also introduced within its legal system the English common law concept of trust.

It may be rightfully claimed that the Maltese legal system has been able to absorb a number of different legal and cultural influences from the two European countries which have shaped a large part of its history, and whose cultural influence remains very high to this day: Italy its closest neighbour to the north, and the United Kingdom.

The Maltese legal profession is a very well established and independent profession. Many lawyers carry out post-graduate studies outside Malta, especially in England but also in other Western European countries. The courts are impartial and independent. All the normal minimum safeguards for fair judicial proceedings and due process are in place through the Constitution and through Malta's adoption of the European Convention on Human Rights as part of its domestic law in 1987. This was not an entirely new development as the Constitution already provided for a comprehensive bill of rights.

INTRODUCTION

Since 1988, Malta has been establishing a comprehensive legislative and regulatory framework for financial services activities and international business. This is an ongoing process which is continuously being improved and upgraded.

The current framework reflects developments in three major areas:

- the gradual adoption of a series of laws which establish sophisticated rules and safeguards appropriate for the development of Malta as an international financial and business Authority;
- the creation of a strong regulatory and licensing authority operating to the highest standards;
- substantial improvements to tax legislation encompassing reforms in domestic and international taxation and in the administration and collection of tax.

THE LEGISLATIVE FRAMEWORK

The initiatives undertaken to develop a comprehensive and integrated set of laws for the financial services sector have involved the enactment of new laws as well as the enhancement, amendment and consolidation of existing legislation.

The legislative framework presents the following features:

- establishes the Malta Financial Services Authority (MFSA) as the single regulator of financial services;
- provides a comprehensive regulatory framework for the setting up, licencing and marketing of all types of collective investment schemes and institutional funds and for providers of investment services;
- lays down a framework for the regulation and supervision of insurance business;
- incorporates a modern banking law which conforms with the best practices of European Union banking regulations and supervision requirements;
- provides for an adequate level of regulation of a number of designated non-banking financial activities;
- allows the setting up and recognition of trusts;
- has brought Maltese company law in line with European Union Company Law Harmonisation Directives, particularly by providing new rules for mergers, divisions and the disclosure of financial statements, the regulation of branches and other matters;
- adopts European Union and Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development (OECD) standards in respect of supervision and the prevention of money laundering and insider dealing;
- consolidates the various provisions in Maltese law on professional secrecy which provide the necessary reassurance to foreign investors without hindering the supervision of fiscal and regulatory compliance and without obstructing investigations into serious crimes as money laundering and insider dealing.

THE MALTA FINANCIAL SERVICES AUTHORITY ACT (MFSA)

The MFSA is a public authority set up by Act of Parliament namely the Malta Financial Services Authority Act, 1988 as amended in 1994 and 2002 which establishes the Malta Financial Services Authority (MFSA) as the regulator for financial services in Malta. The Authority is the successor to the MFSC, and assumes all its functions plus new responsibilities as the regulator of investment exchanges and stockbroking firms. The law also provides for the eventual repeal of any remaining distinctions in the treatment of offshore and onshore entities, in the final phase of a process which began in 1994. The main organs of the Authority are the Board of Governors, the Executive Co-Ordination Committee, the Supervisory Council, the Board of Management and Resources and the Legal Office. The Authority comprises several specialised units which together provide a structure for the licensing and supervision of persons or companies engaged in the different financial services activities. The Authority is responsible for ensuring high standards of conduct and management in the financial services industry and it is vigilant in identifying any practices which adversely affect the economic interests of operators and consumers in the areas of financial activity that it supervises. Under the Act, the Authority has a duty to keep under review and to co-ordinate financial activities carried on in Malta and to disseminate information about matters relating to the exercise of its functions to the public. The Authority has the power to investigate possible contravention of the law or of licence conditions by operators. In pursuit of its functions, the Authority co-operates and collaborates with other financial regulatory bodies both locally and overseas. As a public statutory body, the Authority derives its status and powers directly from legislation. The law also determines the principal organs making up the Authority and their respective functions.

The consumer

In stating the main functions of the MFSA, the Act highlights the role of the Authority as the promoter of the general interests and legitimate expectations of consumers of financial services. The Authority may investigate any complaint made by a person having an interest in any financial services matter under any law. The MFSA must also promote fair competition practices and consumer choice within the financial services industry.

The law also enables the setting up of schemes to compensate depositors, investors and policy holders whose claims cannot be satisfied by holders of financial services licences.

Consumer Complaints Manager

The Act makes specific reference to the Consumer Complaints Manager at MFSA whose brief is to investigate complaints from private consumers arising out of any financial services transaction, and to refer such cases, where appropriate, to the Authority's Supervisory Council for its consideration.

The Financial Services Tribunal

The Act provides for the setting up of the Financial Services Tribunal. It shall consist of a chairman and two other members appointed by the Minister. It may be resorted to on appeals with respect to administrative measures, decisions and/or directives issued by the Competent Authority. Upon hearing such appeal, the Tribunal shall have the power:

- (a) to confirm, reverse or vary the decision of the competent authority;
- (b) to require the production of any document or information;
- (c) to order the payment of costs and expenses by any party to the appeal.

THE INVESTMENT SERVICES ACT (ISA)

The Investment Services Act, 1994 as amended in 2002, is one of the major pieces of legislation which are administered by the Authority. The Act provides the statutory basis for the licensing and regulation of persons and companies wishing to set up investment services undertakings and collective investment schemes. The Act requires that investment services business may not be undertaken in Malta or from a base in Malta without a licence from the MFSA. The ISA lays down the broad criteria to be applied by the MFSA when considering applications.

The MFSA regulates and licenses a broad range of service providers and seeks to provide a stable regulatory environment which encourages the development of investment services business in a sound and professional manner. The protection of investors' interests is paramount and powers are available to take action against those who undertake licensable activity without an appropriate licence as well as against those who fail to meet the required standards. However, the MFSA is mindful of the importance of providing licence holders with the freedom to innovate and to develop new products to meet the changing needs of the market.

When considering whether to grant or refuse a licence, the MFSA is legally required to have regard to three criteria set out in the law:

- (a) the protection of investors and the general public;
- (b) the protection of the reputation of Malta taking into account Malta's international commitments;
- (c) the promotion of competition and choice;

In addition, when considering an application for an investment services licence or a collective investment scheme licence, the MFSA takes into account the reputation and suitability of the applicant and of all other relevant parties closely connected with the scheme.

Investment Services Licence

An investment services licence is required when the following activities are carried out in relation to an 'instrument', an investment services licence is required for:

- (1) dealing as principal or agent;
- (2) arranging deals;
- (3) management of investments;
- (4) providing trustee, custodian or nominee services;
- (5) providing investment advice;
- (6) providing stockbroking services.

The term 'instrument' is defined in the ISA and covers a wide range of investments and financial products, including shares, bonds and other securities and foreign exchange dealings. The MFSA will only grant a licence if it is satisfied that the applicant, (or in the case of a company, each of its directors and officers) and other related parties are 'fit and proper' to provide the investment services concerned and that they will comply with the applicable rules and regulations. In general there are three criteria which have to be met by those who must satisfy the 'fit and proper' test. These are: the integrity, competence and solvency.

Collective Investment Schemes

The definition of a 'collective investment scheme' in the ISA is a very broad one which embraces corporate schemes such as open-ended and closed-ended investment companies, investment partnerships and other non-corporate investment vehicles. The MFSA will grant a licence for a collective investment scheme where it is satisfied that the scheme will comply with the relevant regulations and that its directors and officers, or in the case of a unit trust its trustees, are 'fit and proper persons' to carry out the functions required of them. The MFSA will in particular examine and consider the nature and features of the proposed scheme and the type of investors to whom it will be marketed. It will also review the experience and track record of all parties who are to be involved with the scheme.

Professional Investor Funds

Professional Investor Funds (PIF's) are a type of collective investment schemes. The PIF regime consists of three categories: they may be promoted to "experienced investors" namely persons having the expertise and knowledge to be in a position to make their own investment decisions and understand the risks and requiring a minimum investment level of EUR15,000; PIFS designed for professional and high net worth investors aggregated under the term “qualifying investors” - a term which requires a minimum investment level of EUR75,000 or that investors have a minimum net worth of EUR750,000 and PIFs designed for extraordinary investors requiring a minimum initial investment of EUR750,000. Careful consideration is given to the needs of fund managers and investors and the MFSA offers a streamlined and rapid processing procedure for licence applications. A PIF is distinguished from a normal retail fund by special rules relating to its establishment, management and marketing in a manner which reflects its distinction from normal retail funds. The object is to reduce to an acceptable minimum the information and documentation needed to establish a PIF. In most cases a corporate PIF would take the form of an incorporated open-ended or closed-ended investment company or partnership – in the form of a SICAV or a unit trust.

SPECIAL FUNDS (REGULATION) ACT

The Special Funds (Regulation) Act which came into force on October 1, 2002 is made up of 16 parts, three of which constitute the brand new legislation regulating retirement funds, and the rest introduce further updates to the financial services laws which were enacted or last amended in 1994 and 1998. The law provides the tools for regulating Retirement Schemes and Retirement Funds deriving mainly from employer pension schemes and private savings. During the last two decades, many countries have departed from the reliance on a pay-as-you-go system for pensions (commonly known as the “first pillar” of retirement income), and have introduced (or re-introduced) various forms of private funding. The new law will help in attracting funded retirement benefit arrangements between an employer and his employees (“second pillar” of retirement income) as well as arrangements that involve a contributor and a beneficiary.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS ACT

The Financial Markets Act (Chap. 345) regulates investment exchanges and provides for the orderly trading in securities. The Act also provides for the setting up of the Listing Authority to authorise the admissibility of financial instruments to the official list or to any other recognised list. The Listing Authority must ensure compliance with any requirement or conditions set out in the Listing Rules.

THE INSURANCE BUSINESS ACT AND THE INSURANCE INTERMEDIARIES ACT

Insurance business is regulated by two separate but complementary laws, the Insurance Business Act, 1998 and the Insurance Intermediaries Act, 2006. These two Acts govern all relevant operators in this sector, including insurers, re-insurers, agents and sub-agents, brokers, and insurance managers transacting business in Malta. The MFSA is the Competent Authority responsible for administering the two Acts. The legislation regulates both domestic and international insurance activities being carried out by authorised companies and insurance brokers. It provides for a highly competitive market operating within a legal framework meeting international standards. The insurance legislation is largely modelled on European Union Directives, particularly with regard to solvency margins and technical provision requirements. It provides for the regulation and supervision of different types of insurance companies, including captive insurance companies and reinsurers, and insurance intermediaries.

THE BANKING ACT

The Banking Act, 1994 as amended during 2002, replaced previous banking legislation dating from 1970 and introduces modern regulatory and supervisory practices into the Maltese financial system. The European Union Directives are the main source of reference for most changes and the changes introduced reflect Malta's commitment towards increased harmonisation in international banking regulation. The Banking Act is administered by the Malta Financial Services Authority, which is responsible for licensing and supervising all banking activities. The Act provides a definition of what constitutes banking activities, and lays down a strict regulatory regime coupled with the flexibility warranted in a modern, competitive and dynamic banking environment.

The Act adopts the concept of "credit institution" - which originates in the European Union First Banking Co-ordination Directive – makes provision for authorization procedures relating to the opening of branches and representative offices of foreign banks in Malta and includes provisions relating to formal co-operation with foreign regulatory authorities. It also introduced new regulations for auditors of credit institutions. The competent authority must approve persons intending to acquire five per cent or more participation in the share capital of a credit institution.

The minimum paid up capital for a credit institution is €5,000,000. The adequacy of own funds is measured on a risk-weighted asset basis. Changes have also been effected to those provisions in the previous law relating to prohibited transactions. In fact the Banking Act recognizes the importance of measuring and monitoring concentration of risk through the concept of establishing and limiting large exposures in relation to a bank's own funds.

The Act also established two institutions: (i) the Financial Services Tribunal which offers licensees and applicants an opportunity to appeal from certain decisions taken by the MFSA as the Competent Authority and (ii) the Supervisory Council which comprises the Director Banking, Director Insurance, Director Company Compliance, Director Investment Services and is chaired by the Director General who co-ordinates the regulatory function with the Authority.

The amended Banking Act 1994 (as amended in 2002) introduced the concept of electronic money and electronic institutions. Although credit institutions were already given the opportunity to undertake the business of banking electronically, this possibility has now been extended to 'stand alone' institutions. As such, prospective Electronic Money Institutions now have regulatory parameters and a licensing framework in place. A new directive in line with the new provisions of the Banking Act 1994 and the EU Directive 2000/46/EC on the Electronic Money Institutions has also been issued.

THE FINANCIAL INSTITUTIONS ACT

The Financial Institutions Act, 1994 defines the activities to be carried out by financial institutions. The business of financial institutions includes fund raising other than from the public and activities such as financial leasing, money broking, foreign exchange, other money market activities and the regular and habitual acquisition of holdings. In broad terms, the Act regulates areas of financial services not covered either by the Banking Act, 1994 or the Investment Services Act, 1994, and establishes a general regulatory framework for financial activities which do not amount to banking or investment services. It sets out the obligations of licence holders as well as the functions and powers of the Malta Financial Services Authority as the supervisory authority.

THE TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES ACT

The Trusts and Trustees Act, 2004 provides that a trust may come into existence in any manner. The law specified that a trust may be created by a unilateral declaration, which is a declaration in writing made by the trustee, giving the name of the trust and containing all the terms of the trust as well as the names or information enabling the identification of all the beneficiaries; by oral declaration or by instrument in writing including by a will, by operation of law or by judicial decision. There are no restrictions as to the nationality, residence or domicile of the settlor or the beneficiaries of a trust and the trust property shall may include immovable property situated in Malta. The Act provides that the maximum duration of a private trust, unless sooner terminated, is 100 years from the date on which it comes into existence.

The proper law of a trust is determined in accordance with the Act. The terms of the trust may provide for the proper law of the trust to be changed to the law of another jurisdiction.

The Trusts and Trustees Act also provides for the appointment and regulation of trustee whether natural persons or corporate trustees. Thus a person may carry on the activities of trustees provided they are duly authorised to do so by the MFSA irrespective of the proper law of the trusts they hold and whether or not all or part of the trust property is in Malta.

Trusts may be either Maltese or foreign trusts. Maltese trusts are those that adopt the law of Malta as their proper law and are governed by the rules contained in the Trusts and Trustees Act, 2004. These trusts are not required to be registered with the MFSA in order to have effect in Malta.

THE RECOGNITION OF TRUSTS ACT

The Recognition of Trusts Act, 1994 was enacted to enable Malta to adopt the Hague Convention on the law applicable to trusts and on their recognition. Consequently unit trusts governed by a foreign trust law may be conducted and managed from Malta. The Act also creates the legal mechanism whereby Maltese Courts may recognise the validity of a foreign trust.

THE COMPANIES ACT

The Companies Act, 1995 came into force on 1 January 1996. The Companies Act replaced the Commercial Partnerships Ordinance of 1962 which had originally introduced modern company law principles into Maltese law.

The Act built on the existing rules and broad structures, improving and updating them to meet the needs of a more sophisticated and complex financial and commercial environment. It not only modernised and upgraded Maltese company law, but it also introduced the principles and standards established in the Company Law Harmonisation Directives of the European Union.

The Act defines the powers and duties of the Registrar of Companies who is responsible for ensuring compliance with the provision of the Act. Such person is appointed by the Minister of Finance.

The Act provides the statutory basis for the regulation of commercial partnerships. A commercial partnership may be of the following kind:

- the limited liability company, based on the English company model;
- the partnership ‘en nom collectif’, where the partners have unlimited liability for the debts of the partnership;
- the partnership ‘en commandite’ where at least one partner has unlimited liability for the debts of the partnership. This category is similar to the limited partnership existing in certain foreign countries.

These commercial partnerships, once constituted, enjoy a distinct legal personality. The Act also recognises and regulates corporate investment vehicles such as the SICAVs which is a limited liability company with variable share capital and the INVCO which is an investment company with fixed share capital. These two structures are useful collective investment vehicles.

The Act has a number of important features:

- (a) there is a clearly defined emphasis on corporate responsibility, whereby directors and other company officers are expected to perform and to conduct themselves with reasonable diligence and competence;
- (b) detailed provisions as to the form and content of the accounts of a company on the fourth and seventh company law harmonisation directives;
- (c) detailed provisions which allow for the mergers and division or de-merger of companies;
- (d) a company may denominate its share capital in a foreign currency and to draw up its accounts in same currency;
- (e) clear and practical provisions regulating the pledging of company shares and other securities;
- (f) rules to safeguard the interest of third parties who deal in good faith with the company;
- (g) detailed provisions that govern the possibility of a company acquiring its own shares;
- (h) mechanisms which allow for the possibility of a change in a company’s status - from a public company to a private company and vice versa;
- (i) structures and rules for the dissolution and winding up of companies, providing for two main forms of winding-up procedures namely winding up by the Court and voluntary winding up.

THE PREVENTION OF MONEY LAUNDERING ACT

The Prevention of Money Laundering Act, 1994 defines the crime of money laundering along the lines adopted in the European Union and makes it a criminal offence in Malta to utilise or to employ money derived from crime. The law lays down an extensive list of underlying offences on which a money-laundering act could be based. It reduces the possibility of the financial system being abused for the purposes of laundering funds derived from illicit activities. The offence may also be committed by those who aid or abet money laundering. The supervisory authorities and operators within the financial sector are obliged to report any evidence of money laundering which comes to their knowledge to the Police.

To avoid any uncertainty, an express statutory exception has been made to the rules governing professional secrecy in order to allow financial operators and supervisory authorities, acting bona fide, to communicate cases of suspected money laundering to the Police.

Detailed regulations govern the duty of financial operators to know and identify clients, to keep proper records and to report suspicious transactions to the authorities. The competent authorities have issued guidelines elaborating and explaining the legal requirements in this regard for the benefit of their respective licensees.

PREVENTION OF FINANCIAL MARKETS ABUSE ACT

The Prevention of Financial Markets Abuse Act 2005 transposes and implements the provisions of the Market Abuse Directive (2003/6/EC) together with its Implementing Measures and provides for the repeal of the Insider Dealing and Market Abuse Offences Act. The purpose of the Prevention of Financial Markets Abuse Act, 2005 is precisely to safeguard the integrity of Maltese and Community financial markets and to enhance investor confidence in those markets. The Act is applicable to financial instruments admitted to trading on a regulated market in Malta or in any other Member State or EEA State or for which a request for admission to trading on such a market has been made.

The Act widens considerably the definition of 'market abuse' to include

- (a) Prohibited use of inside information to trade in any financial instrument admitted to a regulated market; and
- (b) Market manipulated through dissemination of false, exaggerated or misleading information, spreading of false rumours or putting into effect simulated or artificial operations or transactions or orders.

THE PROFESSIONAL SECRECY ACT

The Professional Secrecy Act, 1994 elaborates the existing provisions of Maltese criminal law with regard to professional secrecy. Article 257 of the Criminal Code had established the basic principle of the protection of professional secrecy in relation to information obtained from customers. A duty of professional secrecy extends not only to government officials and to professionals, but also to their employees and agents. All secret information communicated for professional or government reasons is protected by penal sanctions.

The Act identifies a number of exceptions to professional secrecy where the information is already legitimately in the public domain (and therefore no longer secret), including the following

- the person who communicated the information has authorised disclosure;
- there is an express statutory authorisation for disclosure;
- unless stipulated to the contrary, the information is communicated to employees, partners and assistants of the person to whom it was entrusted for the performance of services requested by the customer.

THE SET-OFF AND NETTING ON INSOLVENCY ACT

The Set-Off and Netting on Insolvency Act (Chap. 459) provides for the enforceability of set-off and netting on bankruptcy or insolvency. The Act provides for the possibility of the parties to a contract to agree on any system or mechanism which will enable the parties to convert a non-financial obligations into a monetary obligation of equivalent value and to value such obligations for the purposes of any set-off or netting. Furthermore, the Act also provides for the inapplicability of Section 2013(3) of the Civil Code in the case of an assignment of a debt or an action forming part of an agreement containing a close-out netting provision.

THE MALTA FINANCIAL SERVICES AUTHORITY (MFSA)

The Malta Financial Services Authority (MFSA) is the focal point of the Maltese regulatory environment for financial services. Its functions include:
